Dreamstime [3] have announced a tie-up with my space allowing myspace users to select images from the dreamstime archive and have them printed as personal greetings cards. Photographers earn a $0.06 or $0.07 royalty for each card printed.

It's a great example of a microstock site opening a new revenue stream which was not previously there. Users benefit from a vast selection of images to choose from on their cards; and photographers sell 'direct' to individual consumers who would not know a microstock site if it fell on their head from cyberspace.

The service planned launch is just in time for the Christmas holidays.
